WHO Definition of Health

Health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity.

The correct bibliographic citation for the definition is:

Preamble to the Constitution of the World Health Organization as adopted by the International Health Conference, New York, 19-22 June, 1946; signed on 22 July 1946 by the representatives of 61 States (Official Records of the World Health Organization, no. 2, p. 100) and entered into force on 7 April 1948.

The Definition has not been amended since 1948.

Human Rights Promote Child Health

 By providing a framework to respect, protect and fulfill the right to health

The Right To Health for Children

Universal Declaration of Human Rights, Article 25

"Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and of his family, including food, clothing, housing and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control."

International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Article 12(1)

"The States Parties to the present Covenant recognize the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health."

UN COMMITTEE ON ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND CULTURAL RIGHTS Twenty-second session Geneva, 25 April-12 May 2000

Comment 14 on the Highest Attainable Standard of Health ICESCR Article 12(1)

 Health is a fundamental human right indispensable for the exercise of other human rights

 The right to health is not the right to be healthy

• the right to health....extends not only to timely and appropriate health care but also to the underlying determinants of health, such as access to safe and potable water and adequate sanitation, an adequate supply of safe food, nutrition and housing, healthy occupational and environmental conditions, and access to health-related education and information, including on sexual and reproductive health.

 A further important aspect is the participation of the population in all health-related decision-making at the community, national and international levels

The right to health can be measured:

- Availability
- Accessibility
- Acceptability
- Quality

CEDAW

Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women

CEDAW

Convention on the Rights of the Child

CRC

- States Parties recognize that every child has the inherent right to life.
- States Parties shall ensure to the maximum extent possible the survival and development of the child.

States Parties recognize the important function performed by the mass media and shall ensure that the child has access to information and material from a diversity of national and international sources, especially those aimed at the promotion of his or her social, spiritual and moral well-being and physical and mental health.

States Parties recognize the right of the child to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health and to facilities for the treatment of illness and rehabilitation of health. States Parties shall strive to ensure that no child is deprived of his or her right of access to such health care services.

 States Parties recognize the right of every child to a standard of living adequate for the child's physical, mental, spiritual, moral and social development.
