

Academic Health Department Learning Community

---

Would you like to learn more about academic health departments (AHDs) and their role in public health?

Do you have experience establishing or working in an AHD that you would like to share?

Are you passionate about the value of AHDs to the public health system?

The AHD Learning Community is the place for you!

What is the AHD Learning Community?

The AHD Learning Community is a national community of public health professionals interested in the potential of AHDs—formal affiliations of health departments and academic institutions—to enhance public health education and training, research, and service. It brings together practitioners, educators, and researchers from across the country to share knowledge and collaborate as they work to develop, expand, and sustain AHDs.

Why Join the AHD Learning Community?

The AHD Learning Community can help you:

- ◆ Explore the AHD model for public health
- ◆ Connect with colleagues who share your interest in AHDs
- ◆ Learn from others' experiences
- ◆ Collaborate to strengthen public health knowledge

AHD Learning Community activities include:

- ◆ Meeting to discuss AHD topics
- ◆ Collecting and creating resources to support AHDs
- ◆ Building member profiles
- ◆ Disseminating AHD knowledge

Visit the AHD Learning Community at <http://www.phf.org/programs/AHDLC>

For more information or to join the AHD Learning Community, please contact Kathleen Amos at kamos@phf.org or 202-218-4418.

The AHD Learning Community is an initiative of the Council on Linkages Between Academia and Public Health Practice. The Council on Linkages is funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the Health Resources and Services Administration. It is staffed by the Public Health Foundation.