

THE COLLABORATIVE ON HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Teleconference: Integrating Environmental Health into Clinical Practice

November 18, 2011

10:00 am Pacific / 1:00 pm Eastern

Prenatal exposures to environmental contaminants have been associated with a wide range of diseases, both in the neonatal period and later in life. While research is uncovering the connections between environmental exposures and health problems, clinicians are beginning to incorporate this information into patient care.

- Katie Huffling, CNM will present a prenatal environmental screening tool
- Sandy Worthington, WHNP-BC, CNM, will discuss the Green Choices Project
- Dr. Kirtly Parker Jones, MD will present information on counseling patients

Visit the teleconference website: http://www.healthandenvironment.org/wg_calls/9910
Contact Karin Russ, Reproductive Health Coordinator: karin@healthandenvironment.org